Our Mission:

Called to be shepherds, doing God's work, daily.

NRSVue

Every week I read the bible. I read in preparation of a sermon. I read in public worship. I read in devotional moments. I care deeply about God's word and pay attention to the Bibles that I use. Yes, Bibles. Not all translations of the Bible are the same. All translations convey a part of the theology and world view of the ones making the translation. So, I use different bibles at different times. Sometimes I even read different translations side by side to listen to the different ways that God's word is brought to life.

In worship, we most often use the New Revised Standard Version translation of the Bible which was first published in 1989. Over the decades, small changes have been made to the text, a tweak here, a revision there. But after over 30 years, the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U.S.A. (NCC) commissioned the Society of Biblical Literature (SBL) to review and update the NRSV. The October 14 press release from the NCC says that the update "follows in the tradition of the King James Bible, making changes that were warranted on the basis of accuracy, clarity, euphony, and current English usage."

The new updated edition is so significantly different that it calls for a new name. And because the New New Revised Standard Version seems a bit silly, we now have the NRSVue (updated edition). The NRSVue is available today as an ebook and we will soon see printed translations become available. It will take time for the new translation to work its way into our worship and devotional lives, but it is coming.

Translations change because language changes. Translations change because our awareness of how language reflects and shapes attitudes change. I watch some of the old shows on MeTV and often cringe at the jokes or portrayal of women, people with disabilities, or people of color. I try to speak with and to people as I would want them to speak to me. Updated translations offer us a new way to hear God speaking to us in the language of our day.

You can easily search online for some examples of specific changes if you are interested. Or like me, you could wait and encounter God's word as it comes, possibly in an unexpected way, when you least expect it. There is nothing wrong with our existing NRSV's and they will be around on shelves for years to come (as evidenced by the remnant of the RSV's on various shelves around St. John's). As you encounter some of the language that is familiar, but maybe a little different, ask yourself, is God's voice entering the world in a new way for the next generation to hear it. How is God's Word heard anew this day?

Listening for God's Word,

Pastor Erik Weber

Discernment Process among South Central North Dakota ELCA Congregations

Overview

At its second meeting, the Area Ministry Planning Team worked toward coming to an agreement on where to focus their energies and where to begin. Their work on developing this focus was rooted in what they had already talked about at the first meeting and in an honest assessment of the current realities facing them.

Current Realities

It is worth noting that the strength of the team is seen in the variety and diversity of experience amongst its members. It also is found in a willingness to work together and a commitment to the church. At the same time, the team is limited and challenged by time constraints, the reality of burnout, and the hesitancy to speak without first consulting the congregation.

The team expects that together our congregations will be stronger, spark participation, reduce stress, and be more stable. However, going forward and being successful could result in some members leaving, stretching pastors thin, and confusion (in particular around technology).

Focus Questions

The team began to work on identifying the questions they need to address. The questions they came up with fall into six general areas:

1. The role of the pastor
2. What is available for pastoral services and the needs of congregations
3. A vision for success - what it looks like, how much time is needed, and what is church?
4. The options for change - understanding what can and can not and what should and should not change
5. Finances

Alignment – how can we work with varying congregations depending upon our needs

Next Meeting

The team expressed their interest in seeing and understanding the pastor situation in the area. They would like to review the current pool of pastoral leaders, where they are located, how they are committed or called. With this, there will also be a review of the current pastoral and staffing needs across all of the congregations. This would include needs related to worship, pastoral care, education, and general leadership. Pastor Soli will gather this data in preparation for the next meeting which is January 18th.

Greetings from new WELCA President—Julie Opp

Women of the ELCA!

Four of us met on January 9th at 10 am to discuss the upcoming events and happenings for the New Year of 2022. We have many exciting ideas and would like to share the excitement with YOU!

We need your ideas on starting a Bible Study. We have World Day of Prayer to plan, Bold Women's Day, some up coming Cluster meetings and just some ideas of bringing more of us together.

I would like to share a devotion that has got me thinking of our Church and its function:

**Hebrews 10:24-25 says “And let us consider how we may spur one another on toward love and good deeds, not giving up meeting together, as some are in the habit of doing, but encouraging one another and all the more as you see the day approaching.”

See you at the WELCA meeting on February 13th at 10 am and give us what you would like to see in WELCA in 2022

God Bless, Julie
